

Three Things No One Tells You About Retirement

With
Buoy Coaching

Three Things No One Tells You About Retirement

With Buoy Coaching

All Rights Reserved

This guide is designed to provide fundamental and reliable information with regard to the subject matter covered. However, it is important to note that this guide is being offered with the understanding that the author, publisher and affiliated companies are not offering legal, financial, or other professional advice. The services of a professional should always be sought. The author, publisher, and affiliated companies disclaim any liability that is incurred from the use or application of the contents of this book.

All Rights reserved. No part of this book may be used or reproduced in any manner without the written consent of the publisher.

Copyright 2014 Robert S. Laura

Published by RetirementProject.org

1) There Is A Dark Side Of Retirement

There is a hidden epidemic taking place within the shadows of retirement; a chilling reality that can impact retirees and their families more deeply than any economic recession or market crash. It's the dark side of retirement, where addiction, mental illness, and even suicide are quickly becoming so prominent that new and soon - to - be retirees must become more aware of the impact these powerful influences can have during retirement and develop a plan to avoid them.

Drug & Alcohol Addiction

It is expected that by 2020, the number of retirees with alcohol and other drug problems will leap 150% to 4.4 million - up from 1.7 million in 2001.

According to the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration, the proportion of older people treated for a combination of cocaine and alcohol abuse tripled between 1992 and 2008. For this group, in 2008, cocaine abuse was the leading cause of admissions involving drugs (26.2%), with abuse of prescription drugs a close second at 25.8%.

Depression

The National Institutes of Health report that, of the 35 million Americans age 65 or older, about 2 million suffer from full - blown depression. Another 5 million suffer from less severe forms. Women are at a greater risk for depression because of biological factors such as hormonal changes and due to the stress that comes with maintaining relationships or caring for loved ones who are ill. Health conditions, including heart attack, stroke, hip fracture or macular degeneration, and procedures such as bypass surgery, can also trigger the onset of depression.

Suicide

Suicide rates are highest among those over the age of 65 with white males taking their own life at almost triple the overall rate, and are eight times more likely to do so than women in the same age group.

As startling as this information may be, the dark side of retirement is all too real, and requires new and existing retirees to make specific plans to help them avoid these dangers. If retirees don't take the time and energy to plan for things like replacing their work identity, filling their time, staying connected to family and friends, as well as remaining mentally and physically sharp, some of these factors could dramatically alter how things end up for them in retirement.

2) Your Health Is Your Wealth

Most of retirement conversations today are focused on "your number" ... or how much money you need to have saved in order to retire happily ever after. While the need for comprehensive financial planning and saving for retirement is obvious, everybody knows that money can't buy happiness or good health.

Now more than ever, it's important for people to look beyond their financial numbers and savings habits and focus on their health - related factors as well. Oftentimes, people think the extra time they have in retirement will provide the motivation they need to live a healthier life than when they were working... but old habits are hard to break, and new habits are hard to make. In fact, most people don't realize that retirement only magnifies what you already are, particularly when it comes to health. If you frequent the couch, prefer fatty foods, or are always trying to please others, retirement will only provide more time to reinforce those habits.

That's why it's important to take as much care of your health as you do your wealth, because the best legacy you can give your family is a happy and healthy you. Therefore, in addition to knowing how much you need to save, how your assets should be allocated, and how much you can withdraw each year, make sure you consistently monitor numbers like these as well:

- Cholesterol level
- Fasting blood sugar level
- Body mass index (BMI)
- Blood pressure
- Resting heart rate

Retirement well-being is not only about your physical health and what you're eating, but also about what might be eating you. If your body and soul are filled with fear, resentment, worry, guilt, anger or other emotional issues, it will show up in your physical appearance and your behavior. Emotional health requires that you have time to yourself and the space in your life to adapt to what's happening. Being overwhelmed or stressed out can leave you feeling inadequate and easy to anger around your loved ones.

Therefore, a truly comprehensive retirement plan today requires that you put "how much you need to save" behind "the numbers you need to stay alive" because the real foundation for wealth, is your complete and total health.

3) Retirement Is A Metaphor

Retirement in its simplest form is a metaphor for the life you wish to lead and the legacy you plan to leave. Our belief is that retirement is a blank slate upon which each individual must fill it up with what is important to them. It's also a privilege some people never get to experience, so we encourage you to treat it with purpose and intention.

Keep in mind, there's nothing automatic about the act of retirement itself. It won't just unfold into the greatest time of your life. Making it the best it can be, takes time, practice, and concentrated effort.

That's why I suggest you treat retirement like a camera and focus on what's important. Be sure to capture the good times, develop from the negatives, and if things don't turn out the way you expected, take another shot!

Mentally and emotionally consider retirement like an ocean: calm and still one moment, bumpy and unyielding the next... but in the end always beautiful. Its physical demands can be a lot like riding a bike, where you have to keep moving or you'll lose your balance... and socially, retirement can mimic the game of basketball, meaning it's not meant to be played alone.

Overall, my mission is to help individuals and couples plan for the mental, social, and physical aspects of retirement. That's why my first priority is education and information. I want to empower and support others as they make the transition from work-life to home life.

Whether you're already retired or just a few short years away, this guide is only the first step. I invite you to learn more about me and how I work with clients like you, by clicking here, or you can request more information, by calling (510)-500-4566 .

I'm here, and ready to help you retire well!

Retire Well With These Next Steps

Deciding to retire is one of the most important decisions you will make for yourself and family. You deserve to not only be prepared financial but also mentally, socially and physically. The more equipped you are to replace your work identity, stay relevant and connected, as well as keep mentally and physically sharp the more successful you will be in making the transition from work like to home life.

Align Yourself With A Retirement Coach

Larry Jacobson is a hands-on and experienced coaching professional who is passionate about helping people retire well. Together, he blends his personal and professional experience to help you explore and make the most of your time, talents and energy in retirement. Learn more.

Let Me Go To Work For You

Through my personalized approach, I will work with you to determine your current level of retirement readiness and well-being. Then we'll develop a plan to help you address any unmet needs or desires, monitor your progress, and take action to create the retirement you desire... Learn more.

Enjoy Your Retirement

Through training and retirement coaching I have come to embrace the fact that no one wants to run out of money, let alone family, friends, or good health. My commitment to you is to help you preserve the non-financial aspects both now and well into the future. Learn more.

About Larry Jacobson

Larry successfully transitioned from CEO to sailor and achieved his dream of sailing around the world. Then from sailor to author and speaker, he now focuses all of his energy into his coaching programs for retirement planning. His ground breaking program, Sail Into Retirement, has quickly achieved notoriety as the gold standard in the field.

A California native, circumnavigator and adventurer, Larry Jacobson is an avid sailor with over 50,000 blue water miles under his keel. He is the author of the six-time award-winning memoir of his six-year circumnavigation in the book, The Boy Behind the Gate. He lives in the San Francisco Bay Area and welcomes new friends and inquiries at: www.buoycoaching.com

Three Things No One Tells You About Retirement

Larry Jacobson
Buoy Coaching
4 Admiral Drive
Emeryville, CA 94608
(510)-500-4566
larry@buoycoaching.com